CLOSE UP is an opportunity for students, teachers, and government officials alike to share perspectives on "living government." Politics has become so much a part of our daily lives that we can no longer afford to take anyone else's word for and about what is going on. Yet poor voter turnout, lack of interest in local politics, and a general naivete about national affairs strongly indicate that traditional methods of learning are not meeting the challenge. What is needed is an alternative to our present "textbook" approach to government. That is what CLOSE UP is all about.

For the last six years, CLOSE UP has been bringing students and teachers to the very center of American government and political activity. Through a rigorous, first-hand examination of government in Washington, we are providing you an opportunity to achieve a meaningful degree of understanding about your government and about how you can participate in it. As a bipartisan forum, CLOSE UP keeps its curriculum free from any single ideological slant so that you can examine the actualities of American government and then be free to formulate your own political convictions. The program, therefore, does not consist merely of tours, souvenir hunts, or a few moments as witness to routine business in the Senate. These traditional "Washingtonisms" will continue to be reserved for the "senior class trip."

Instead, using the unique facilities of Washington as a classroom, for one week you will be part of the processes of government. As such, you will be involved in head-to-head discussions with members of the House and Senate, committee staffers, administration figures, judges, lobbyists, reporters, politicians, ambassadors, and just ordinary concerned citizens who contribute to the daily complexity that is our government. Through your many discussions, conversations, seminars, and dialogues, you will gain an understanding of how government changes constantly to meet new needs; how it adjusts to new situations and pressures.

By the end of your CLOSE UP week, you will be tired but intellectually invigorated. Your opinions will be your own, but they will be grounded in facts and experiences that reflect a basic understanding of the realities of government in Washington today.

CLOSE UP CURRICULUM

The CLOSE UP concept goes far beyond the rigidly structured curriculum of textbook American government. Rather than utilizing the formal approach, as a CLOSE UP participant, you will focus on the informal aspects of government—the cooperation, conflict, and compromise that take place every day in our governmental process. This is a side of government about which texts do not and cannot provide complete understanding. You will have considerable opportunity for every kind of dialogue — formal briefings, informal questioning, spontaneous and imaginative “rap” sessions.

The greater part of each seminar is devoted to your questions and the speaker's responses. Formal presentation is thus minimal, although most speakers do provide a few minutes of introductory information at the start of a session. Past programs have made it clear that students can and do take excellent advantage of the question and answer format. Sessions are invariably informative and often quite surprising.

Senator Gary Hart

Congressman Lloyd Meeds

WORKSHOPS

For the duration of the week, each participant is assigned to one of the several small discussion groups with at least one member of the CLOSE UP staff. The emphasis in these sessions or “workshops” is on free and informal talk. Subject matter ranges over a great many things, but generally the workshops are a chance to relate the day's experiences to your own concerns and to get further into whatever may be of special interest to you and your group. In the course of these workshops, you will also be able to learn a good deal more about some of the differing perspectives to be found among people of your age from your point of view as well.

PRIOR PARTICIPANTS

CLOSE UP participants who are returning for another year will take part in a program of directed study into areas of special interest scheduled by the CLOSE UP staff. These activities will be in addition to the regular schedule and are not designed to replace the regular CLOSE UP curriculum.

Questions—the core of a CLOSE UP week

A MULTIPARTISAN FORUM

CLOSE UP is multipartisan — we have no affiliation with any branch or level of government, or with any political parties or interest groups. Our Board of Advisors includes people in public life representing both political parties and a full spectrum of political viewpoints. While we encourage our participants to evaluate all that is heard and seen during the course of the week, we leave the political judgments to participants, rather than to anyone on the program staff.

CITY/COMMUNITY CONCEPT

CLOSE UP has developed the innovative and unique city/community or regional program through which you, your friends, and teachers join together (occasionally with a similar group from another area) to form the principal enrollment of an entire CLOSE UP session. In order to ensure a representative socio-economic cross section of community participation, a limited number of fellowships are awarded to every participating school in your community. This balanced participation from your own community has proven to be deeply significant. Seldom do students and teachers from public and non-public secondary schools, representing every economic and social level, have an opportunity to establish camaraderie, to exchange viewpoints, and to interact in a learning experience. The combination of students who receive fellowships and students who pay the full program price themselves or are able to find a community sponsor creates an exciting and effective learning environment.

You will discover upon returning home that you can have a powerful and constructive impact on the other students in the community. Together you can create an interested and better-informed nucleus for greater participation in school, community, and national affairs.

ALLEN J. ELLENDER FELLOWSHIPS

The late Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, past President Pro Tempore of the Senate, was a valued and dedicated friend to CLOSE UP. Senator Ellender's consistent support and encouragement of the CLOSE UP city/community concept was singularly important to the development of the overall program. As a tribute to him, funds have been authorized by Joint Resolution of Congress for a limited number of Allen J. Ellender Fellowships. Available through the Close Up Foundation, these fellowships are for participation in the CLOSE UP program by students of limited economic means and by their teachers from participating communities.

Information about these fellowships is available through your high school. Interested students should contact the teacher designated as Teacher/Coordinator for his or her school.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT AND ADDITIONAL STUDENT PARTICIPATION

In addition to the Congressionally sponsored fellowships the Close Up Foundation encourages businesses, foundations, and other private sources to provide fellowship support for students and teachers. These "matching" contributions have enabled the Close Up Foundation to award many more fellowships than are available through the Allen J. Ellender Fellowship program. Additional students, who do not receive fellowships but who wish to attend the program, generate their own tuition by working or through parental and community support. Community involvement is a vital part of the Close Up concept and is a major factor in the success of the program.
